TEARS IN VALUE OF STREET

Mrs. Ray gave a slight galvanic start, drew up both elbows, and drew down both eyebrows, involuntarily, while her forehead flushed purple for an instant. She was herself again the next moment. But she was not a little puzzled how to receive the news; especially as there was another visiter in the room, into whose kindly credulous ears she had been pouring hints of her influence over, and intimacy with, the good man himself. This visiter, Miss Polly Little, was one of the kindest creatures that ever wore the name of "old maid." She always believed everything that every one told her-at least, if it was to the advantage of any being; and if statements would sometimes conflict with each other, the most that she would say was—

"Well, it's very queer I can't see through

You don't tell so!" she exclaimed, with the broadest of believing smiles, the instant after Aunt Liph had ended her say. "Why! well, well! it's a queer world, and queer folks in it! Now, I had a kind of thinking he was looking over this way—eh, Mrs. Ray?" and she looked good-humoredly at her hostess for her assent to this very unwelcome home-

Mrs. Ray repaid her by a vinegar glance, scarcely sugared by common politeness. She had resumed her needle-work, for a moment interrupted; and now she said, with more dig-

"I should like to know what authority you have for that report, Mrs. Brown ?"

"Why! it's a fact, I tell you, as sure as you're living, Widder Ray!" replied the astonished gossip-monger.

"Who told you?" interrupted Mrs. Ray, looking up curtly, in spite of herself.

"Why, I was just now down to Deacon Johnson's-you know, Polly, her child'en's just over the whooping-cough, and I was fetching Benny a bag-full of onions to roast nightsthey're the sovereignest cure for the hangingon hack of a cough! Well, as I was saying, I went down there, being out o' sewing-work and down I sits, to be a bit sociable. Says I to Deacon Johnson, 'Well, what's the news, Deacon?' Says he, 'You 'mind me that I hain't been to fetch any news yet; it's office day; and so off he goes."

Mrs. Ray had laid down her work, and was listening attentively.

"So there I sat with Miss Johnson, a waiting for him to come back; and Miss Johnson, says

"Never mind Mrs. Johnson. What was". "That's just what I'm going to tell you! Miss Johnson, says she, 'It's getting springlike.' 'Yes,' says I. 'I suppose our minister' be thinking so pretty soon, may be. When do you expect him? for, you know, the Deacon has the keys of the house and barn. know,' says she; 'I guess likely the Deacon will get a letter to-day.' And sure enough, five minutes after, he came trudging up the steps with a letter open in his hand. was in a kind of a pucker; and down he sat, with his hat on, to read it. Now, it's my opinion Deacon Johnson ain't much of a scholar larnt man"-

Mrs. Ray frowned and hemmed impatiently; but there was no hindering the digression.

"Because, though I don't set up for much extra learning myself, I was always brought up to read writing; that I was! You can't tump me on the crookedest word! and Mr. Young writes a readable hand, for sure. For last I gets out of patience; and says I, 'Bless acon, he might have writ three while you've been reading the one! Here, let's help you along a bit!' Up I jumps, and makes a catch at the letter. Deacon Johnson looks up over his specs; then he takes them off kind of slowly, and lets go the letter, with, 'Well, I dare say-it's no pr-privacy!' (you know how he sticks in his words.) So I read it with my own good eyes-they are as good as they were at sixteen, this day, without spees; and there it was, in black and white!" she exclaimed, triumphantly.

"And he said he was going to get mar-ried?" put in Miss Polly, who had been pla-cidly and patiently listening to this long, shallow flow of words "Got married, I tell you! done-for-fixedclear finished up the business! in a hurry, too, I'm thinking! It puts me out of breath to think on't! Why, there's his blessed wife that was. hasn't laid still in her coffin more than a year! And he must take a bout after a new one-and a furriner at that!"

"A foreigner?" repeated Mrs. Ray, quickly and sharply. "What do you mean?"
"Why, it's furrin to us, to be sure, away down South there, where they live among the niggers! I don't mean she ain't an English woman, [Mrs. Brown, somehow, dubbed all Anglo-Americans English,] but such an one as she's likely to be, had better have stayed away from these parts. Such as hasn't been used to brush a fly off their little finger, wont go any great ways with us hard-working phasis. "You don't say she's a Southerner?" said good-hearted Polly Little, for the first time seeming slightly disturbed. I must explain, that, in Polly's vocabulary, "Southerner," and "slaveholder," were synonymous.

said she, with a sort of bitter em-

What else could she be ?" retorted Mrs.

Ray; then suddenly putting on an air of in-difference, she added, "I suppose he didn't mention the time of coming?

Yes, he did, though, along about the last paragraph; and it's right upon us, too, for he's to be here this very day week. The Deacon is going to get the house fixed right up; and ms to me he said something or other about getting you to help him. But he speaks so slow, and I was so all flustered up with the news, that I didn't rightly take the sense of his talking. Bless me! how I'm wasting my time with you! I can't stay a bit longer. All I've got to say is"—she jumped up and tied her green calash—"that if any slaver woman has set up to come here and lord it over us farmer folks, she'll find herself pretty much mistaken; hey, Miss Ray?" [TO BE CONTINUED.]

A Democrat yesterday offered to bet $100 that there was no truth in the articles copied from the New Hampshire papers respecting Gen. Pierce.
A Whig accepted the wager. "But," said the Democrat, "who shall decide?" "Atwood," said the Whig. "Oh no," replied the Democrat,
"I can't trust Atwood." "Well," said the Whig. "I will leave it to the officers of the meeting, whoever they be." "No," rejoined the Demo-crat, "I would'nt believe anybody in the world!"

That's a specimen of a saving faith.

[Richmond Whig.

The Augusta (Ga.) Telegraph, Democratic, says, in a tone not very complimentary:

"We pray God, that whatever the Union Convention may do, Toombs and Stephens will decide not to act with the Democratic party. We should consider it the greatest calamity that could befall that party to have Toombs and Ste-

We don't believe a word of this, for it is Messrs. Toombs and Stephens who have put this party THE WHIG PLATFORM.

The Whigs of the United States, in Convention assembled, firmly adhering to the great conservative republican principles by which they are controlled and governed, and now, as ever, relying upon the intelligence of the American people, with an abiding confidence in their capacity for self-government and their continued devotion to the constitution and the Union, do proclaim the following as the political sentiments and determinalowing as the political sentiments and determina-tions for the establishment and maintenance of which their national organization as a party is-effected:

1. The government of the United States is of a limited character, and it is confined to the exercise of powers expressly granted by the constitution, and such as may be necessary and proper effected: for carrying the granted powers into full execu-tion; and that all powers not thus granted or necessarily implied are expressly reserved to the States, respectively, and to the people.

2. The State governments should be held secure in their reserved rights, and the general government sustained in its constitutional powers, and the Union should be revered and watched over as "the palladium of our liberties."

3. That, while struggling freedom everywhere enlists the warmest sympathy of the Whig party, we still adhere to the doctrines of the Father of his Country, as announced in his Farewell Address, of keeping ourselves free from all entanglish gling alliances with foreign countries, and of never quitting our own to stand upon foreign ground. That our mission as a republic is not to propagate our opinions, or impose on other countries our form of government by artifice or force, but to teach by example, and show, by our suc-cess, moderation, and justice, the blessings of self-government and the advantages of free institutions.

4. That where the people make and control the government, they should obey its constitution, laws, and treaties, as they would retain their self-respect and the respect which they claim and will enforce from foreign powers.

5. Government should be conducted upon principles of the strictest conducted upon principles.

ciples of the strictest economy, and revenue sufficient for the expenses thereof, in time of peace, ought to be mainly derived from a duty on imports, and not from direct taxes : and in levving such duties, sound policy requires a just discrim nation, and protection from fraud by specific duties when practicable, whereby suitable encouragement may be assured to American industry, equally to all classes and to all portions of the country.
6. The constitution vests in Congress the power to open and repair harbors, and remove obstruc-tions from navigable rivers; and it is expedient that Congress should exercise that power, whenever such improvements are necessary for the common defence, or for the protection and facility of commerce with foreign nations or among the States; such improvements being, in every instance, national and general in their character.

7. The federal and State governments are parts of one system, alike necessary for the common prosperity, peace, and security, and ought to be regarded alike with a cordial, habitual, and immovable attachment. Respect for the authority of each, and acquiescence in the constitu-tional measures of each, are duties required by the plainest considerations of national, of State, and of individual welfare.

8. The series of acts of the 31st Congress commonly known as the Compromise or Adjustment (the act for the recovery of fugitives from labor included) are received and acquiesced in by the Whigs of the United States as a final settlement, in principle and substance, of the subjects to which they relate; and, so far as these acts are concerned, we will maintain them, and insist on their strict enforcement, until time and experience shall demonstrate the necessity of further legislation, to guard against the evasion of the laws on the one hand, and the abuse of their powers on the other—not impairing their present efficiency to carry out the requirements of the constitution; and we deprecate all further agitation of the questions thus settled, as dangerous to our peace, and will discountenance all efforts all that, I got tired waiting for the Deacon to finish; and he wipes his specs, and fusses his wherever, or however made; and we will mainforefinger along the lines like a snail, till at of the Whig party and the integrity of the Union.

HOW RADWAY'S RENOVATING RESOLVENT CURES CONSUMPTION.

To cure Consumption we must stop decay and rebuild and heal the worn-out organs of the system that disease has consymmet.

we must treat every organ in the system, for the Lung are not the only organs affected. It affects the Liver, the Heart, the Kidneys, Bladger, and Pancreas; and, in fact every organ in the body is more or less tainted with decomposition and decay.

THE LUNGS

THE LUNGS

ARE THE BREATHING APPARATUS OF THE SYSTEM When the Lungs are in a state of decay they are unable to receive or emit the necessary amount of air requisite to sustain life. The greater the atmospheric pressure upon the air-cells, the more painful, irritable, and suffocating is the weight upon the lungs.

Protection from Lightning.

THE undersigned, being the duly appointed Agent of Syratt's Electrican and Electron Manuscroat, Covington, Kentucky, begs to offer these superior Reds, of Spiral-twisted, Carbonized Annesied Iron, with Zine Protectors, and Electro-positive elements combined in their manufacture; thus rendering them equal to copper as conductors. They are in ten-feet lengths, with accurately-fitted brass-screw connecting joints, an entire new style of metallic (patented) attachments, for brick or frame buildings; also, glass isolaters, of a novel and ingenious construction, (patented,) forming a lock; the whole mounted with a solid platinum silver point, (patented,) twelve inches long, surrounded at the base with three angular negative magnets, which possess the power, to an extraordinary extent, of discharging the opposite elements of the most fearful thunderstorm, and embrace the entire perfection of science up to the present time; the whole constituing the most magnificent and perfect silent conductor ever presented to the public.

Safety has not been compromised by affording these excellent rods at such low rates; the greatest attention has been given to their construction, so as to be readily attached. The astonishing power of the negative magnets, in discharging the air of its opposite elements, has been clearly demonstrated by the Electrometer, when unmagnetized points have shown but slight results, though placed under the same conditions. In fact, they gather and silently discharge electricity from the atmosphere when you would scarcely suspect any being present.

These improvements being secured by double letters patent, you are hereby cautioned against laying yourselves liable, by purchasing of those who are not authorized, or who are substituting inferior imitations. All agents duly appointed can show their certificates. Have good rods or none.

CHARLES W. HEYDON, THE undersigned, being the duly appointed Approximately Strate's Electrican and Electro-Metallurgist

I do hereby certify that I have app lied various powerful chemical reagents to Spratt's Patent Points for Lightning-Rods, and that the results of these experiments convince me that they will resist the action of atmospheric causes, and thereby preserve the extremity sharp—a condition most essential to protection against lightning. The reagents used in the above experiments were a solution of chloride of solium, (common sait,) acetic acid, sulphuric acid, and hydrochloric acid. With the first, there was no action on the metal; with the several acids, there was very slight—a fact sufficient to show that atmospheric influences would have no sensible effect.

JOHN LECONTE, Prof. of Nat. Philiet Chem.
UNIVERSITY OF GA., October 8, 1850.
The Lightning Conductors of Mr. Spratt, offered to me, are well calculated to perform the office for which they are intended. Yours, truly,

CRICAGO, September 3, 1850.

CRICAGO, September 3, 1850.
This may certify that I have examined, somewhat critically, James Spratt's Patent Lightning Rods, and that I am of opinion that it is constructed on scientific principles. For combining durability, cheapness, and efficacy, I deem it equal, and I think superior, to any other rod over offered for my inspection.

AUGUSTA, (GA.) November 11, 1830.

equal, and I think superior, to any other rod ever offered for my inspection.

Argusta, (GA.) November 11, 1850.

This will certify that I have examined the Lightning Rods, Metallic Points, and Isolating Attachments, manufactured by Mr. Spratt, and regard them as constructed in conformity to the general laws of the electric fluid; and the metallic compound constituting the Points, as promising, from the result of several tests to which they were submitted, to resist for years the action of those atmospheric causes most likely to corrode them.

A. MEANS, Prof. Phys. Sc., Emory College, Ga., and Prof. Chem. and Pharm., Medical College, Gs.

The Lightning Conductors put up by Mr. Henry M. Smith, of this city, on the plan of Mr. Spratt, appear to me to be ery well devised; and, in point of mechanical construction, are the best I have ever seen.

It is to be hoped that the use of these Rods may become general, as an important auxiliary defence against a danger which must be regarded as of no ordinary magnitude, to which all buildings are liable.
